LITTLE JOHNNY JONES.

The music of "Little Johnny Jones" is said to be one of its most attractive features, and among the most popular numbers are "Yankee Doodle Boy," "Give My Regards to Broadway," "Mile. Fauchette," "They're All My Friends," "Girls of the U. S. A." "Good Old California," "Captain of a Ten Day Boat," "Nestling in a New York Tree," "Life's a Funny Proposition after All." The company numbers over sixty people, including a chorus of forty and a cast of exceptional excellence. No musical production of the current season excels in beauty and magnificence "Little Johnny Jones," and it is only reasonable to expect that the theater will be crowded on the occasion of its presentation in this city, Wednesday, February 7th. Seats are selling fast; better secure yours now.

MRS. WILHELMINA MORRISSEY.

Mrs. Wilhelmmina Morrissey died at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Ed. Lally, of Mill Creek, yesterday at 7:30 o'clock, after an illness of several weeks.

Mrs. Morrissey was born in Hockin, Hanover, Germany, in 1829, coming to Cincinnati in 1854 and to Maysville in 1856, where she had since resided.

Her maiden name was Schrader. She leaves one sister, living in Germany, and two sons—Messrs. Frank Gaebke of Covina, Cal., and Louis T. of this city, and one daughter, Mrs. Rector Lukins of Mayslick.

The family have the sympathy of their many friends in their sorrow.

The funeral will occur Thursday morning at 9 o'clock from St. Rose of Lima Church, Mayslick.

Burial at Washington Cemetery.

CHARLES C. GAULT.

Mr. Charles C. Gault, who has been ill for several weeks at the home of his sister, Mrs. Thomas L. Best, near this city, passed away at 3:15 this morning.

Deceased was 45 years of age and was related to many of Mason county's most prominent families.

Upon the establishment of the rural mail delivery here Mr. Gault became one of the Carriers, and his clever and jovial disposition made him one of the most popular.

Later he assumed a clerical position in the local Postoffice, which ill health compelled him to give up after a short time.

Surviving him are three sisters and one brother—Mrs. Thomas L. Best, Mrs. John Caldwell and Mrs. Robert Barnes,—the latter two residing at Millersburg—and Mr. W. W. Gault.

The funeral will take place from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Best at 10:30 tomorrow morning, the Rev. F. K. Struve of the First M. E. Church, South, conducting the services.

The interment will be in the Cemetery at Washington.

The German Relief Society elected the following officers at their regular meeting last night—

THAT Auditor's Agent's Attorney, Mr. CASON, who has been nosing through the records in County Clerk Wood's office, claims to have found many thousands of dollars belonging to sundry Maysville people. Dig on, "Casy," old boy; maybe you'll find the thousand or two that I wish I had.

THE City Council of Ashland revoked the licenses of three saloon-keepers who had violated the law; and one of the saloonists and a pair of his beer-slingers took revenge by black-jacking Policeman BARNEY. When they are caught they should be compelled to caress the rockpile with napping-hammers for a few months.

HERE'S a winner in the meanest man contest. Mrs. A. J. WILSON, who had $2,000, the savings of fourteen years labor as attendant at the Lunatic Asylum at Lexington, gave the money to her husband to invest in the furniture business. He "invested" of course, but he sold out the shop, pocketed the proceeds, and now the poor wife asks the police to find him.

THE Educational Bill proposes, among other things, a division of the School Fund, giving to the white schools the taxes paid by the white men, and to the Negro schools only that revenue paid by Negroes. If this becomes law, and is applied in Maysville, there'll probably be enough money to run the Colored School for two or three weeks in the year.

OLD VIRGINIA

CHEROOTS

Package of 3 for 5 Cents

(A cheroot is a cigar made without the head)

The difference between a good 5-cent cigar and the famous Old Virginia Cheroot is mostly right here: You get three good smokes for your 5 cents instead of one.

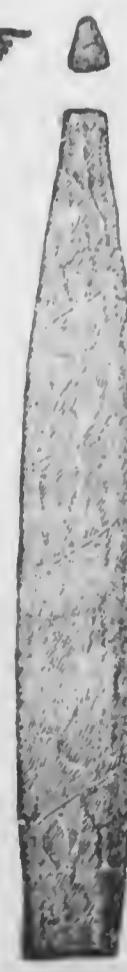

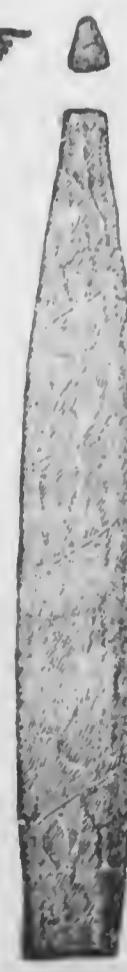

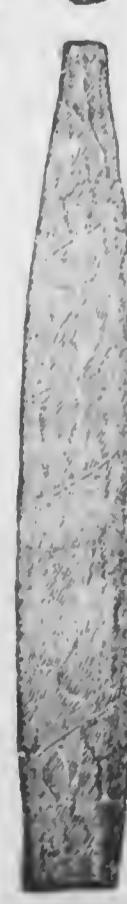

No difference in quality.

The difference in price is due wholly to money-saving in the making. No useless hand-made "head". No full-length filler—five different kinds of high-grade blended leaf but all small leaves and selected clippings. No small-quantity manufacturing methods—a million produced every day in the best organized and cleanest cigar-factory in the world.

BATTLE OF FRANKLIN

A True Account Written By General George W. Gordon to Correct Some Previous Errors

Lexington Herald.

To the Editor of The Herald: During the past autumn The Herald copied, without comment, from a Northern publication an exploitation of General Schofield's record, stating that at the battle of Franklin he, "with 30,000 men, completely routed almost double that number under General John B. Hood." Having participated in that sanguinary conflict, I was surprised at the unjust estimate by a critic who was probably in embryo, or not born, at the time; at any rate, he was not there.

Knowing General George W. Gordon whose word is good North and South on account of his fairness and conservatism—was the youngest and one of the most gallant Brigadiers engaged at Franklin, I wrote to him for his story of the battle, to be published in answer to the absurd statement that 60,000 Confederates under leaders like Hood, Hardee, Cleburne, Forrest, Cheatham and others could be "routed" anywhere, even by Oyama, at the head of 60,000 Japs. General Gordon tells the truth, with full justice to the gallantry of Schofield and his men.

I saw the body of General John Adams' horse dead across the breastworks, fore feet on one side the crest, hind feet on the other. Partially in the saddle still was the body of that heroic Mississipian. As to the brave and fallen Confederates, their "rags" showed for themselves. In the haversacks of all I saw examined afterwards were nothing but ears of parched corn.

But the dead and wounded thirteen general officers and 6,000 privates, all in thirty minutes, tells a story more eloquent than words.

C. E. MERRILL.

Lexington, Ky.

BATTLE OF FRANKLIN, TENN.

By General George W. Gordon of Memphis, Tenn.

The opposing forces in the battle of Franklin were not largely unequal in numbers, the Confederates under General Hood actually engaged being 19,000 infantry, and the Federals, under General Schofield, about 22,000. And in this connection it must be remembered that while the Confederates had the smaller number by 3,000, they were the attacking force, and that the Federals were so well fortified on parts of their line as to render one man defending equal to about four attacking. But notwithstanding this vast advantage on the part of the Federals, their main and most formidable line of defense was broken in the general charge by the left of Gordon's Brigade of Brown's Division formerly Cheatham's Division under the valiant leadership of Colonel Horace Rice, commanding the Eleventh and Twenty-ninth Tennessee Infantry Regiments on a hill. Some of his men being killed fifty or more paces within the enemy's line, and Rice himself being wounded after he had crossed the breastworks. But at this critical juncture, and before the rout could be made general, General Odyke's Brigade of Federal reinforcements arrived at the opportune moment in front of Rice and the small and shattered force he was leading, and pressed them back to the works they had stormed and taken, but which they held till the Federals retreated during the night. It is not true that the Confederates were routed in this battle. It is true, however, that they were repulsed along some portions of the line, especially on the extreme Confederate left. But it is also true that on other portions of the line, notably in front of Brown's and Cleburne's Divisions, the Confederates reached the ditches just on the outside of the enemy's works and held them until the time of the evacuation of the Federals during the night. I have no personal knowledge of this, as I was captured, or rather surrendered, soon after reaching the ditch on the outside of the enemy's works with a portion of the men of my Brigade, and some of General Granberry's Brigade of Cleburne's Division, which was contiguous to mine in making the assault. But I will not encumber this paper with an account of our fight, for perhaps, fifteen minutes, with the enemy across his works, or with details of our surrender there. This I did some years ago in a public address that was published. It seems but a just tribute, however, to the memory of the brave and patriotic men who fought and fell upon that fatal field to say that there was never, perhaps, more dauntless courage or a nobler spirit of self-sacrifice exhibited than was there displayed by that little worn, attenuated, half fed, half clad Confederate army. The attack which failed to take the position, was daring and desperate, while the defense, which held it, was determined and valiant. Ah, indeed, it was a gallant fight, and chiefly distinguished by the romantic heroism and death-defying courage displayed by many on both sides. Comparatively so little has been written and recorded of this intensely tragic battle, that justice has not yet been done to the prowess and intrepidity of the armies that participated in that bloody conflict. It offers material for a thrilling chapter in the martial annals of the world. It is true, that in respect to the numbers engaged it does not compare with many of the great battles of the Civil War. But in respect to the spirit, courage and desperation with which it was fought, it has not been surpassed, if even paralleled, by any combat on American soil. In support of this the following statistics are cited, and show that the cannibals in this battle, especially on the Confederate side, were appalling. In general and field officers, especially, they were greater in proportion to the numbers engaged than in any battle of the war.

Six Confederate general officers were killed, six wounded and one captured. A total of thirteen. Of the four Brigadier Generals of Brown's Division of Hardee's Corps, Carter, Gist and Strahl were killed, and Gordon captured and Major General Brown severely wounded, and his Division commanded the next day by a Colonel. Major General Cleburne and Brigadier General Granberry of his Division were killed. Major General John Adams of General Stewart's Corps was killed, while Generals Cockrell, Quarles, Scott, Manigan, Brown and one other general officer, whose name I cannot now recall, were wounded. Thirteen Regimental commanders were killed, thirty-two wounded and nine captured. Besides these, many other field and line officers were killed and wounded, and about 6,000 of the rank and file lay dead or disabled on the field at the close of that dark and deadly day. The Federal loss; I think, was about one-third of that of the Confederate and reasonably so, as the Federal forces, for the most part, were in formidable breastworks, covered and crowned upon some portions of their line with effective "head-logs" that afforded a great measure of actual protection, to say nothing of that reassuring and steady sense of safety that they inspired.

The Confederate infantry forces actually engaged lost 33%, while in its famous charge at Gettysburg, Pickett's Division lost only 21%, or 12% less than that sustained by the entire Confederate infantry engaged in the battle of Franklin, and in which Cleburne's Division lost 52%, the greatest loss sustained by any Division.

Military statistics of foreign and American battles, as compiled by Lieutenant-Colonel Dodge, of the United States Army, show the following losses: Prussians, up to Waterloo, in eight battles, 18%; Americans, up to Waterloo, in seven battles, 11%; and since, in two battles, 8%; French, up to Waterloo, in nine battles, 22%; and since, in nine, nearly 9%; English, in four battles, 10%; Federals, in eleven battles, nearly 13%; and the Confederates, in eleven battles, 14%; and we show in the battle of Franklin 33%.

These statistics indicate that the battle of Franklin was the bloodiest of modern times, it is true, there was no strategy, no maneuvering for advantage preliminary to joining the issue. It was simply a direct physical assault by the Confederate Army upon a fortified and strongly manned position—a trial of strength and courage, with the physical advantage largely in favor of the Federals. And while the result was unimportant in its bearing upon the final issue of the war, yet, as illustrating the spirit and prowess of the American soldier no battle of those four hoisting and blinding years is more remarkable. And if it had been fought on the battle-scarred and grave-burdened bosom of Old Virginia, where so many brilliant battles were fought and great victories won, where tactical science and martial genius achieved their grandest triumphs, we doubt not that the story of its valor would have been written at the very top of all American military history.

WILL OF WILLIAM STILES

City and County

The last will and testament of William T. Stiles, deceased, probated yesterday, reads as follows—

First—I direct that all of my just debts and funeral expenses be paid, and that my Executor, his relative name, shall erect over my grave a suitable gravestone.

Second—I devise to my niece, Maggie Dawson, all her separate estate, free from all control of her present or any future husband, my use and let on Houston avenue, in the Sixth Ward of the City of Mayville.

Third—I devise to my grand-nephew, James Shaw, the vacant lot adjoining the lot above devolved to Maggie Dawson. I bequeath to him my watch and chain.

Fourth—that the proceeds of my life insurance policy for $1,000 in the Northwestern Life Insurance Company, after payment of my debts, funeral expenses and cost of gravestone, be invested by my Executor, hereinafter to be named, and the proceeds of said investment be paid to my sister, Elvira Stiles, as same is collected, during her life. I further direct that my Executor shall collect the dividends from my five shares of stock in the Mayville Warehouse Company and pay the same to my sister, Elvira Stiles, and upon the death of my sister, Elvira Stiles, and upon the real estate in the town of Germantown, now held jointly by said Elvira Stiles, my brother, Alfred Stiles, and myself, for and during her life.

Fifth—I bequeath to my grand-niece, Idella Shaw, my diamond stud, and upon the death of my sister, Elvira Stiles, I bequeath to Idella Shaw the proceeds of my life insurance policy and my stock in the Mayville Warehouse Company, and I devise to her the real estate in Germantown, described above in the fourth clause of this instrument; and all the rest and residue of my estate, real and personal of every description, I give to my said niece, Idella Shaw.

I appoint C. Burgess Taylor Executor of this will.

Given under my hand this 19th day of September, 1904. WILLIAM T. STILES.

Acknowledged in presence of W. T. Stiles, Isaac Woodward and C. Burgess Taylor, September 19th, 1904.

The School Fund received during the month, from fines and poll tax, $52.20.

City Agent John J. O'Donnell reported $276.81 as amount of back taxes collected during the month of January. His commission amounted to $55.36.

Mr. Thomas B. Carothers, representing a long distance telephone company desiring an entrance into the city, was granted the privilege of being heard by Council. He stated he was negotiating with President Matthews of the local system in regard to coming in over his lines. The matter was referred to the Laws and Ordinance and Grievance Committees with Mayor and City Attorney added.

The proposition of Dowling and Prall for introducing natural gas for heating and cooking purposes was tabled.

The President of the Board of Trade, Mr. John Duley, accompanied by a delegation of business men, appeared before Council. Mr. Duley as spokesman said it was the desire of the business community to cultivate a more intimate relation with our Ohio neighbors, and in order to do so he asked Council to give Wharfmaster Phister a rebate on his monthly collection of wharfage to the amount of $33 per month, in consideration of which he is to give free ferrage every County Court Day. The request was granted unanimously.

Rev. J. M. Evans is engaged in a meeting with Rev. S. D. Boggs at Normal, midway between Calcuttaburg and Ashland. These places are connected by streetcar. A proposition has been made to consolidate the cities and locate the county seat at Normal. The meeting has been one of great interest from the first night, when the seating capacity of the Church was exhausted. The interest has taken possession of the community. There have been twenty-eight additions to the Presbyterian Church, with many more deeply concerned about their personal acceptance of the Savior.
